

Modeling Biological Systems by Computer Simulations

Giancarlo Rossi

Dipartimento di Fisica, Universita' di Roma "Tor Vergata"

Abstract - A general presentation of the possibilities offered by numerical simulations for the modelization of certain biological systems is given. In this context applications of standard methods of Statistical Mechanics to two particularly interesting biological problems

- 1) protein folding
 - 2) dynamical and thermodynamical behaviour of lipidic bilayers
- will be discussed.